

Rosso di Montalcino DOC 2010

wine review
online.com

90

“Col d’Orcia is among the most widely known and respected producers of Brunello di Montalcino, and one of the best ways to understand why that is the case is actually to taste the Brunello’s little brother, which is this Rosso. The wine shows lovely Sangiovese character, with fresh fruit notes recalling pie cherries as well as red and black raspberries, along with subtle accent notes that lend faintly earthy, minerally undertone to the finish.” December 4, 2012

